LIBERTY FEST INFO

WATER CONSERVATION

Governor Cox declared a State of Emergency due to drought conditions in Utah and has asked all of us to take measures to conserve water. Additionally, South Davis Water has informed the City that our allotment has been reduced by 20%. This specific cutback affects the Foxboro neighborhoods and some neighborhoods in the foothills. This is a challenging reduction and can't be achieved unless all of us identify and implement ways to cut-back water usage in order to make it to Oct. 1, 2021 when outside water will be shut down for the year. In areas that are not using Weber Basin water, the City also encourages conservation so that aquifers can be preserved now and in the future.

TOOLS FOR CONSERVING WATER

A green graphic titled "WATER AUDITING 101" with the subtitle "SAVE MONEY & WATER". On the left is a large white water drop containing a dollar sign. Below the title are four steps, each with an icon: a gauge for "Conduct Performance Test", a magnifying glass for "Collect Data", a pie chart for "Calculate System Efficiency", and a clock for "Develop Accurate Watering Schedule & Recommended System Updates".

Did you know the average homeowner in Utah applies almost double the amount of water onto their landscape than is necessary? Most of that is not an issue of belligerently wasting water, but simply a lack of knowing how much water our landscapes need to thrive, how efficient our sprinkler systems are, and how quickly they apply water on to the lawn. Our own Weber Basin Water Conservancy District offers a free water audit service to all homeowners. A water audit consists of well-trained interns from Weber Basin coming to your home and doing a personal assessment on the property. They check the irrigation system and make suggestions if they see anything that could make it more efficient. A simple field soil test is performed to determine general soil type and texture. A catch-cup test is performed to see how quickly the sprinklers are applying water to the lawn and to determine how uniform the water is being applied. Studies show that applying half an inch of water is ideal to adequately water the soil for turf roots without too much water running off the surface of the soil or out of the root zone. Call 801-771-1677 to schedule your own water audit with the Weber Basin Water Conservancy District. The District also has rebate programs for replacing older toilets and the installation of smart controllers for sprinklers. View their programs at www.weberbasin.com/Conservation/Rebates.
